Living in art: Sustainable solutions in dialogue with art, science, and architecture

Beginning June 26th until September 26th 2021, nine temporary, habitable sculptures by international artists can be experienced day or night for the very first time in the Frankfurt Rhein-Main metropolitan region.

The non-profit organization tinyBE brings art, science, and architecture together and offers “day and night experiences” in habitable sculptures. Renowned international artists have created works specifically tailored to and structured for their respective locations, which will be presented to the public for the first time in summer 2021. Work on construction begins May 17th in the Metzlerpark in Frankfurt am Main. Online-bookings for all habitable sculptures starts early June 2021.

International auction house Christie's is supporting the art initiative tinyBE's project with an online auction from 05.13. - 05.27.2021 to benefit the organization's non-profit purposes. Up for auction are eight art experiences in the habitable sculptures during the first nights of the exhibition at the end of June 2021. Six livable sculptures stand on the museum embankment in Frankfurt's Metzlerpark, as well as one sculpture located in Wiesbaden, and one in Darmstadt. An oven sculpture by Sterling Ruby acts as the communal center of the temporary sculpture park.

Christian Jankowski's habitable artwork makes it possible to have an encounter with the famous Bauhaus architect Mies van der Rohe along with nightly views Frankfurt's starry skies. With his livable Biotop, Terence Koh creates a high-altitude refuge in the middle of a vibrant city with spectacular panoramic views of Frankfurt's skyline. Inspired by a space capsule, the collective of artists, architects, and scientists MY-CO-X developed a plant-based space using fungal biotechnology. The celebrated multimedia artist Laure Prouvost allows visitors to experience an internal snapshot of the human body in her work BOOB HILLS BURROWS. The work of artist-duo Mia Eve Rollow & Caleb Duarte raises questions about accessibility and participation. Is reduction the path to beauty? The accessible wooden sculpture from Thomas Schütte is an excellent place to ponder this question and to find out what one really needs.

In Wiesbaden, the habitable sculpture from artist and Fluxus movement pioneer Alison Knowles – who concerns herself with the dwellings of sea creatures – will be realized for the first time worldwide as a 3D-print in a partnership with the Museum Wiesbaden. And Onur Gökmen has cooperated with the Landesmuseum Darmstadt to erect a clay sculpture exploring the connection between past and future.

Sterling Ruby's work BLACK STOVE is an oven sculpture with seating, created from steel – suitable for discussions around a crackling fire in open air in Frankfurt's Metzlerpark. And for the tinyBE extra in Frankfurt, Charlotte Posenenske's "Drehbare Flächen" will be posthumously presented as a room divider. The four rotatable wings can be closed to form a wall, but also open and can be crossed.

The habitable sculptures

A MAGICAL NIGHT BETWEEN TWO WORLDS – ONUR GÖKMEN

Can past and future come together? For Onur Gökmen the answer is simple: Yes. History reaches far into contemporary structures and reveals how closely man and technology are intertwined. Gökmen makes it possible to experience yesterday today in his exclusive, habitable sculpture. Enter a historical world and enjoy the present moment from the roof of a one-of-a-kind artwork. (In Darmstadt)

YOUR DATE WITH A MONUMENT – CHRISTIAN JANKOWSKI

Bringing about a change of perspective, ironically inverting the familiar and uncovering society's contradictions with profound humor: this is what distinguishes the work of media artist Jankowski. In his conceptual monument you will meet with art and architecture on equal footing. Be eyewitness to an extraordinary encounter with Mies van der Rohe. Enjoy intense visual impressions and take in magnificent views of the night sky. (In Frankfurt's Metzlerpark)

STAY THE NIGHT IN THE WORLD PREMIERE – ALISON KNOWLES

Knowles focuses on the relationship between man and machine. An intermedia artist and pioneer of the Fluxus movement who was awarded an honorary doctorate by the Pratt Institute, she translates speech and wordplay in installations and performances. Her work is visual poetry that delights with its strength and humor. Inhabit and marvel at a phenomenal work of art, become part of a premiere: the architectural sculpture that will be realized as a 3D-print is the first of its kind in the world. (In Wiesbaden)

DREAMING AT GREAT HEIGHTS, VIEW INCLUDED – TERENCE KOH

In his early years, the artist caused a sensation with wild and eccentric performances and later, after a period of seclusion, began to occupy himself intensively with nature. His artwork is a habitable Biotop, a cosmos in which the coming together of man and nature forms the perfect place of refuge in the middle of a busy city. The work also offers a spectacular panoramic view of the skyline and the banks of the Main River. (In Frankfurt's Metzlerpark)

SLEEPING IN A MUSHROOM – MY-CO-X

The future becomes reality. This collective of artists, architects, and scientists develops fungal biotechnology from sustainable raw materials in the fields of art and habitation. In times of limited resources, addressing this issue is essential for a worthwhile future. Let yourself be transported to a new, fantastical world, and dive into an ecological process of transformation, artistically inspired by a space capsule. Welcome to the naturalistic future. (In Frankfurt's Metzlerpark)
